President's Message

It was good to see so many of you at the February meeting and to hear Dr. Charmaine Nelson speak about African enslavement in eighteenth century Montreal. We will have to visit the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts to see the infamous renamed painting, "Portrait of a Haitian Woman."

We are now off to some other interesting meetings: March brings with it the consideration of proposed NCWC resolutions for the upcoming AGM. Everyone is welcome to attend and bring their perspective to the new resolutions before we send our comments to NCWC. Discussions regarding these resolutions will take place from 10 am until noon. We hope that many of you will come and participate in the grass roots process of developing NCWC policy. After a break for lunch, there will be a panel discussion organised by the Hon. Eleni Bakopanos where we will hear from the Hon. Marlene Jennings, Mme Mair Verthuy, C.M. and Mme Manon Gauthier, Executive council member for the City of Montreal.

On another note, we are very excited to be hosting the NCWC AGM in Montreal this year! We will have some interesting events and speakers. On Thursday evening the Mayor of Montreal will host a cocktail for our delegates and attendees and on Friday after a day of plenary sessions we will hear from our own Bonnie Destounis, she will speak about what the Development Organisation of NCWC has been doing in the past year. Cocktails and dinner will be hosted at the home of Ginger Petty, a member of our MCW board. Saturday will continue with more plenary sessions and presentation by the Education Fund of NCWC followed by a Council banquet; and finally on Sunday morning there will be a last plenary session after which we will bid a fond farewell to our guests from across the country.

To make all of this happen and to showcase our group and our city in a most wonderful light, we need your help both as volunteers and also financially by acquiring sponsors and donors. Please watch for information going out to you soon. - Dr. Chitra Chopra

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMAN OF CANADA (NCWC) AGM MAY 21 - 24, 2015 MONTREAL,

DR. CHARMAINE NELSON

Black History Month Guest Speaker

As February is Black History Month, we were very fortunate to have as our guest speaker, Dr. Charmaine Nelson who is an Associate Professor of Art History at McGill University and who is also the first Black professor to teach art history at a Canadian university. Dr. Nelson has also held several prestigious fellowships and appointments.

Her research and teaching interests include postcolonial and Black feminist scholarship, critical (race) theory, Trans-Atlantic Slavery Studies and Black Studies. She has made ground breaking contributions to the fields of the Visual Culture of Slavery, Race and Representation and Black Canadian Studies. Nelson has authored five books including, "The Color of Stone: Sculpting the Black Female Subject in Nineteenth-Century America" (Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 2007), "Ebony Roots, Northern Soil: Perspectives on Blackness in Canada" (Newcastle upon Tyne, UK: Cambridge Scholars Press, 2010), and "Representing the Black Female Subject in Western Art" (New York: Routledge, 2010). Nelson Nelson's presentation entitled: "François Malépart de Beaucourt's 'Portrait of a Haitian Woman': Revolutionary Saint Domingue and African Enslavement in Eighteenth-Century Montreal" was a very thought-provoking enlightenment for most. A confliction of artist/owner/patron, which Nelson discussed, "was dangerous for the enslaved Black woman. For years, scholars were unable to pinpoint productions recent evidence has placed Beaucourt and his wife in Saint Domingue (now Haiti) on the eve of the Haitian Revolution." The Beaucourts' (François and his wife's) Haitian sojourn to recuperate the identity and subjectivity of the anonymized Black female subject and to position the renaming of the portrait within the context of the prolific and ongoing institutional erasure of Canadian slavery."

"Portrait of a Negro Slave" was renamed "Portrait of a Haitian Woman" in 2011 by its owner, the McCord Museum (Montreal). It is now on display, at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

Nelson suggested several scenarios for the Beaucourts' escape from Saint Domingue to Montreal via Philadelphia, exposing that the couple's relocation likely resulted in the second forced migration of the sitter, a Dominguan slave woman who was most likely born in Africa.

Dr. Nelson concluded her presentation by reading, "the ambiguous landscape vignette, included in the portrait as a means through which Beaucourt alienated the sitter from the Dominguan plantation from which she was most likely removed.

For those of us who attended, a most informative and provocative discourse. Ashgate Publishing (UK) will be publishing Dr. Nelson's sixth book entitled "Slavery, Geography, and Empire in Nineteenth-Century Marine Landscapes of Montreal and Jamaica" in 2015. - S. Gyles

Canada Post - Community Mailboxes

As part of a "Five -point Action Plan" to better serve all its customers and in a major move to reduce significant regular losses to the post office, Canada Post has started the first phase of a five year plan to install community mailboxes. As door-to-door delivery is being phased out of various urban areas, Canada

Post will convert the Canadian households that previously received door-to-door delivery to community mailbox delivery. This initiative will affect about one third of all Canadian households, most of which are located in urban areas. The other two-thirds of households already receive their mail and parcels either through community mailboxes, grouped or lobby mailboxes or curbside rural mailboxes. These roughly 10 million house-holds will not experience any change as a result of the initiative.

Likewise, many businesses will continue to receive delivery to the door. There will be no change to seniors' residences, apartments or condos where mail is delivered to the lobby and rural customers with a mailbox at the end of their driveway, nor to businesses within business corridors or with high volumes of mail; addressees with delivery to the door, will be notified by mail. Urban home delivery will be phased out over the next five years. The first communities that will switch to community service were announced in the second half of 2014.

Why did Canada Post deem this necessary change?

According to a report published in December of 2013, "While Canadians are communicating and shipping more online, they often are not at home during the day to check their mail boxes for sensitive items that are increasingly sent through the mail, such as identification, credit cards or prescriptions." "Community mailboxes are the optimal solution; they are located close to home, personal mail compartments are locked and can be opened only with the keys provided to the address and they are accessible 24/7. Mail will no longer accumulate at the front door or sit in an un-locked mailbox when residents are away. Each community - mailbox contains locked parcel compartments, making online shopping easier."

It seems that the rise in digital communications has dramatically changed the postal needs of Canadians. More and more people are communicating and managing their household bills online and letter mail (snail mail) has declined however, due to more and more Canadians shopping online, the posting of parcels has shot up. This dramatic shift has created a pressing need for the post office to manage a greater number of parcels and less snail mail.

According to Canada Post, this change is necessary because Canadians are in fact, communicating and shopping more online and with the increasing use of digital communication and the historic decline of letter mail volumes, Canada Post has begun to post significant financial losses. "The corporation, if left unchecked, continued losses would soon jeopardize its financial self-sufficiency and become a significant burden on taxpayers and customers." Community consultation in most areas is now closed and the results compiled and shared feedback given to neighbourhood.

Post Office

An investigation of problems involving community mailboxes done last year by CBC News found Canada Post recorded 4,880 incidents involving community mailboxes, ranging from vandalism and arson to mail theft, between 2008 and 2013. Canada post is doing everything to convince the public that these super-mailboxes also meet the needs of customers with disabilities. They are also exploring alternative approaches to meet the needs of Canadians with significant mobility challenges.

Other planned initiatives by Canada Post:

a) A new approach to prices as a new tiered pricing structure of "Lettermail," which will better reflect the cost of serving customer segments. Those who buy stamps in booklets or coils will pay $0.85 per stamp, with discounts for customers that use the mail most.

b) Expanding convenience through postal franchises, Canada Post will strengthen its retail network by opening more franchise postal outlets in stores across Canada. The company will partner with local retail businesses that are conveniently located in their communities and which offer added benefits, such as better parking and longer hours. This will allow busy Canadians to do more of their shopping in one place. Canada Post will also streamline its corporate-run post offices.

c) Streamlining operations. Changes to internal operations will make for a more efficient flow of parcels and mail through the network and to the customer. These changes are driven by technology (such as faster computerized sorting equipment), consolidation (such as processing mail and parcels in a central location) and providing more delivery employees with fuel-efficient vehicles, so the same employee can deliver both mail and parcels. Improved operations will yield cost-effective and more reliable delivery to Canadians, along with better parcel tracking capabilities.

d) Addressing the cost of labour. With its current labour costs, Canada post has a much higher cost structure than its competitors, which is simply not sustainable. This is simply not sustainable. The company will continue to bring the cost of labour in line with its competitors through attrition and collective bargaining over time. Canada Post will also take the necessary steps to permanently address the sustainability of its pension plan. A leaner workforce will create a more flexible and competitive Canada Post, able to respond quickly to the changing marketplace.

These initiatives will help the Corporation to better serve the emerging needs of Canadians, and fulfill its mandate to remain financially self-sufficient and avoid becoming a burden on taxpayers. For instance, delivering to community mailboxes provides convenience and security, but costs significantly less than the cost to deliver to the door. Franchise post offices provide added customer benefits and opportunities for small businesses looking to grow their business, but cost far less to operate than corporate-run stand-alone post offices.

At news release Canada Post stated that over the next five years, it will eliminate 6,000 to 8,000 positions but it also expects 15,000 workers will leave the company or retire within that period.

Past

Future

Of course there has to be some down side to all of this. As the Canadian population ages and people wish to stay in their homes and be autonomous for as long as they can, how will they fare, after fifty or sixty years of having their mail delivered right to the door. The thought might not be so bad during the summer or let's say even the spring and fall but what about our infamous 'l'hiver's', those frigid cold, icy, slippery days to walk perhaps only a few paces to the corner. Not too encouraging. – S. Gyles

On April 27th, 2015, Seniors Action Quebec will be hosting a timely conference, in English, on the new provincial legislation Bill 52 "Dying with Dignity". There have unfortunately been mixed public messages which created serious concerns and stress among our seniors and family members.

It is important to note that Seniors Action Quebec is not promoting one side of the issue over another. Our goal is to bring a variety of experts together to provide an overview so individuals can have an informed discussion with family members, caregivers and their doctors. Once a decision is made, the individual's close networks will understand the reasons why and respect their decision.

Participants will include seniors, healthcare professionals, medical students, family members, caregivers, community organizations that provide direct services to seniors and the community-at-large.

MAKE IT HAPPEN

Montreal Council of Women International Women's

Day: March 8th

Each year International Women's Day (IWD) is celebrated on March 8. The first International Women's Day was held in 1911. Make It Happen is the 2015 United Nations theme which encourages effective action for advancing and recognizing women. The UN has been declaring an annual equality theme for many years. All around the world, International Women's Day represents an opportunity to celebrate the achievements of women while calling for greater equality.

Thousands of events occur globally to mark the economic, political and social achievements of women. Organizations, governments, charities, educational institutions, women's groups, corporations and the media celebrate the day. Governments, various organizations, many charities and NGOs also identify their own International Women's Day theme by adopting a relevant theme or campaign to mark the day specific to their local context and interests. The Canadian government has chosen as its' 2015 theme "Strong Women, Strong Canada". For example, organisations like the UN, Oxfam, Women for Women, Care International, Plan, World Association of Girl Guides & Girl Scouts (WAGGGS) and more - run exciting and powerful campaigns that raise awareness and encourage donations for good causes.

In celebration of International Women's Day, the Montreal Council of Women has invited for a panel discussion three (3) dynamic and exceptional women who have advocated and advanced women's rights locally, nationally and internationally; who have in fact "Made it Happen"! We are honoured and pleased that the Honourable Marlene Jennings, retired lawyer and former Member of Parliament, Manon Gauthier, City of Montreal municipal councillor responsible for a number of municipal portfolios including for the status of women and Mair Verthuy, MCW member and former MCW President, have confirmed their presence for Thursday, March 5th. They will each present their views on 3 policy areas for advancing women's rights as well as suggest and recommend actions for the MCW and other organizations to "Make it happen".

On behalf of the MCW, I encourage you to attend this important panel discussion in celebration of International Women's Day and look forward to seeing you on March 5th.
